An experiment with Claude Opus 5.5

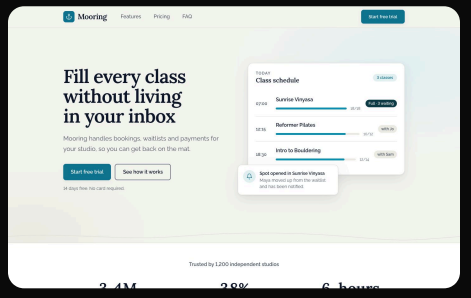

Swipe →

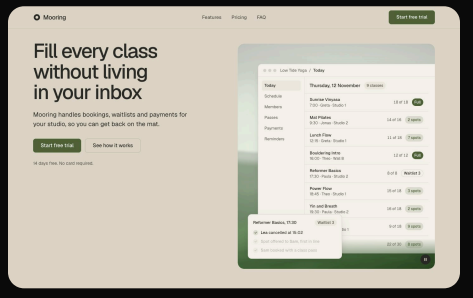

Same brief. Same model. Ten different landing pages.

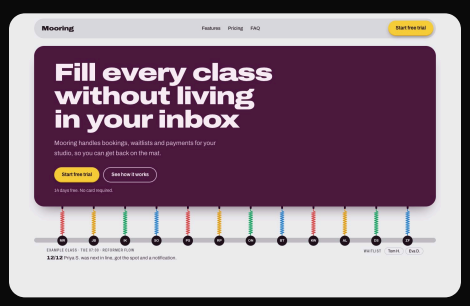

Nine Claude design skills against no skill at all.

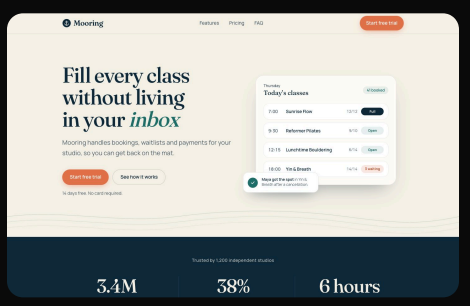

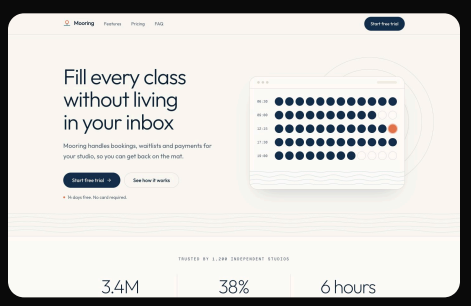

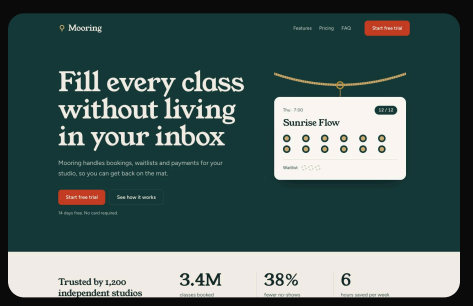

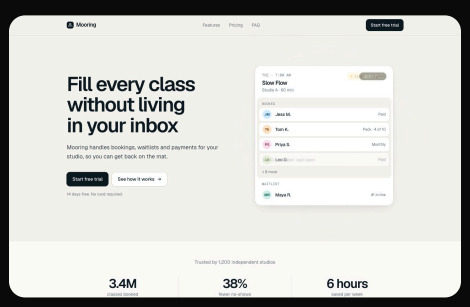

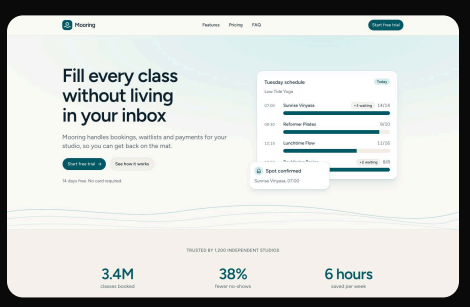

1 Plain Claude is already good.

Three of the nine skills barely changed how the page looks.

2 Concept first, code second.

The pages that look designed came from skills that force a design idea before any code.

3 More checking, more cost.

The strictest skill used 7.6x the tokens of no skill at all. It bought realism, not originality.

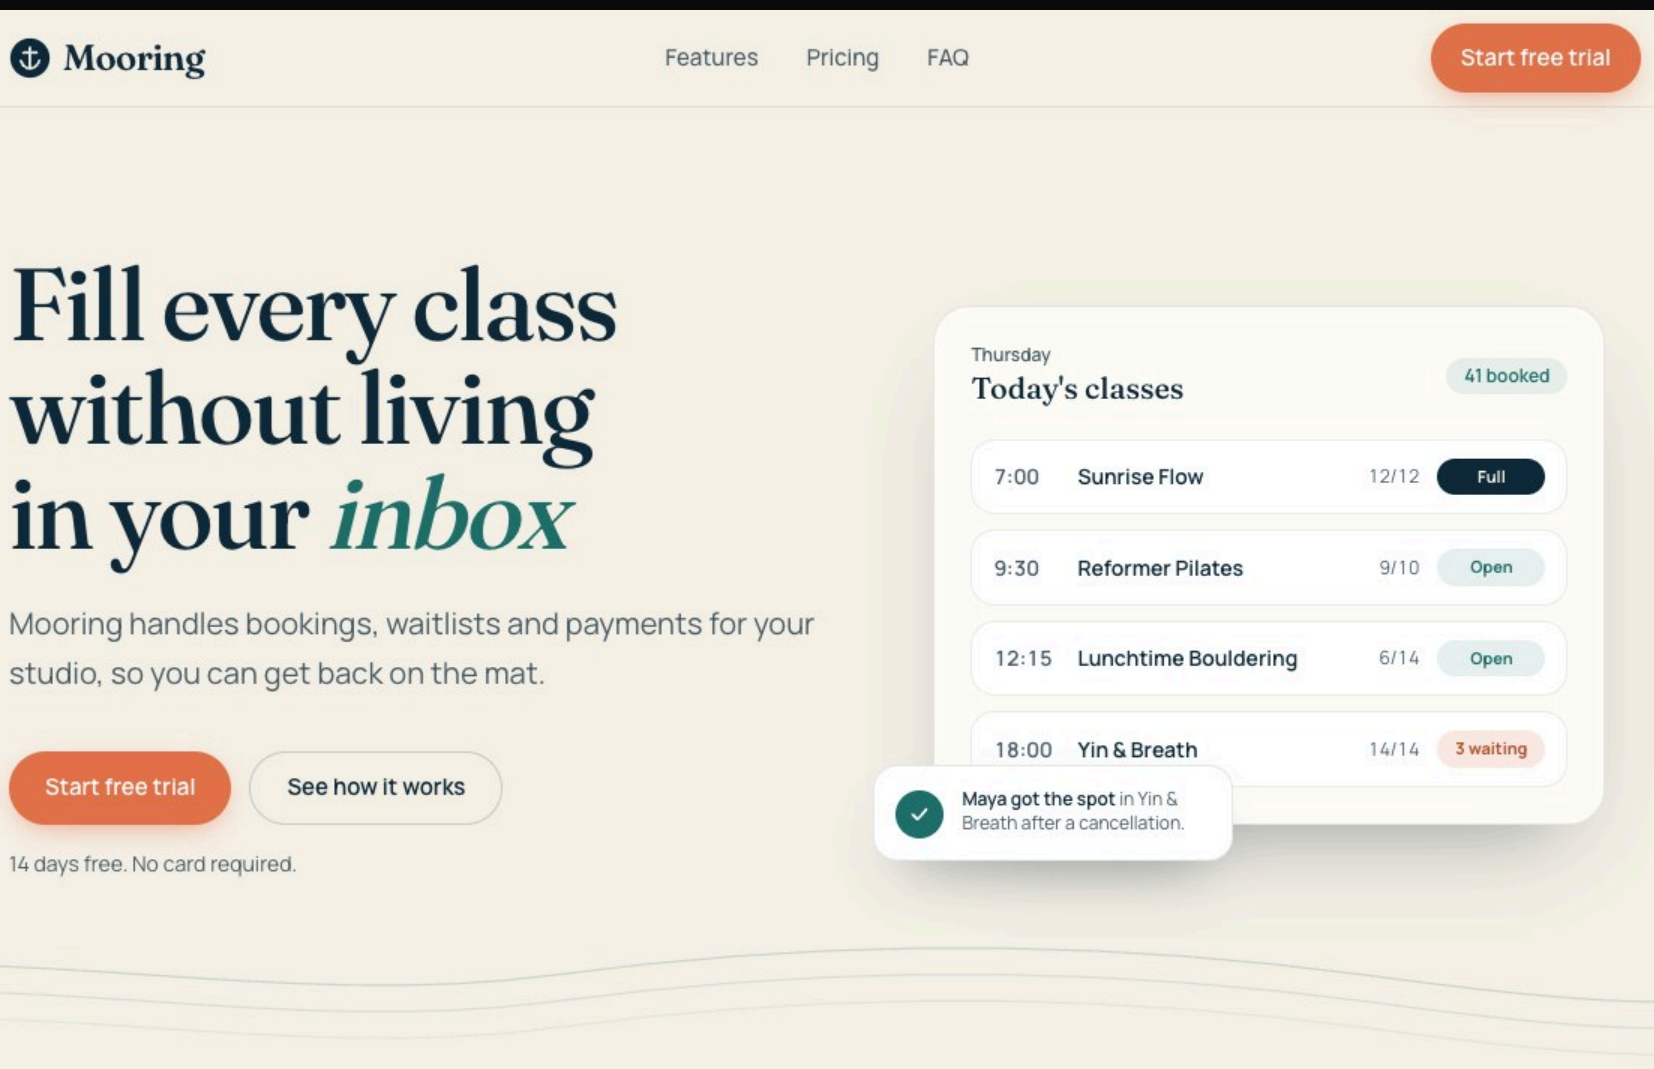

4 Nobody kept the copy.

Told to use the text word for word, every single run changed something.

No skill (control)

★★☆☆☆ A quick, clean page when the look does not need to stand out.
